

Play dough fun with Numicon

Here is an 'accidental' idea from a parent, showing the playful ways that Numicon can be introduced with Early Years pupils...

My four year old daughter Mary is a bit of a play doh addict. Attached are some pictures of what happens if you forget to put the Numicon baseboard away before you let her get the play doh out...

She rolled out the play doh on the bumpy side of the base board, peeled it off & transferred it to the smooth side of the board then chopped it up into number shapes.

The photos show her making a six shape which she cut into a two and a four, then she cut the four into twos.

If you think there are any other play doh addicts out there who might like a go, please do feel free to put any of this in your sharing corner.
