OXFORD

As a student, you spend a lot of time with your textbooks.
Are they working for you?
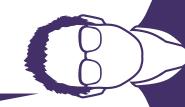

What are the OUP Student Panels?

The OUP Student Panels are groups of students from all around the country who can share their opinions about what they need from a textbook.

The new OUP Law Student Panel will be accepting students from Australian law schools. We are seeking a broad range of students from all year groups who are undertaking undergraduate or postgraduate studies.

OUP Australia has a Teacher Education Student Panel open to undergraduate tertiary students from all around the country. Students come from all year groups and a range of courses.

Why does OUP have Student Panels?

As a leading publisher of higher education resources it is vital for us to make sure our products are meeting your needs as both students and practitioners. This panel gives you the opportunity to have a voice in the publishing process through feedback and reviews.
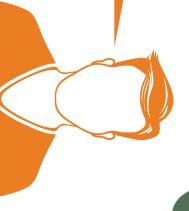

What does being on an OUP Student Panel involve?

• Complete up to 6 e-surveys per academic year

• Review and offer opinions about new publishing ideas

• Get involved in online focus groups

You can join the panel at any point during your tertiary studies and are welcome to remain on the panel until your graduation.

Why should you join?

As a panellist you'll have the opportunity to get to know a wide range of different texts and resources that could give you an edge in your studies and in practice.

Participating students are also rewarded in credits for each task they complete that can be used towards OUP books. The number of credits available per task can vary depending on the amount of effort involved. Each credit is worth AU$5 and panellists can earn up to $500 worth of OUP books per year.

For each year you participate as a panellist, OUP will provide a certificate you can add to your portfolio.
