Oxford University Press

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
HAS A RICH HISTORY.
THE UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD
PRINTED ITS FIRST BOOK
IN 1478, JUST TWO YEARS
AFTER WILLIAM CAXTON
SET UP THE FIRST PRINTING PRESS IN ENGLAND.

In 1586, the University of Oxford's right to print books was recognised in the Great Charter secured by Archbishop Laud from King Charles I of England. This entitled the University to print 'all manner of books'.

Delegates were first appointed by the University to oversee this process in 1633 and records of their deliberations date back to 1668. The structure of Oxford University Press (OUP) as it exists today began to develop from this time.

In the 17th century, OUP established its right to print the King James Authorised Version of the Bible. This 'Bible Privilege' formed the basis of OUP's publishing activities for the next 200 years.

From the late 1800s, OUP began to expand significantly, opening its first international office in the USA in 1896. Others followed, including Canada (1904), Australia (1908), India (1912) and Southern Africa (1914).

Today, OUP is the largest university press in the world. It has offices in more than 50 countries and publishes globally in more than 40 languages – in both print and digital – for a range of audiences across a multitude of cultures and education systems.

As a department of the University of Oxford, OUP's mission is to create world-class academic and educational resources and to make them available as widely as possible, furthering the University's objectives of excellence in scholarship, research and education.

Oxford University Press & PNG

FOR OVER 60 YEARS,
OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
HAS BEEN COMMITTED
TO THE SUPPORT OF
LEARNING AND EDUCATION IN PAPUA NEW GUINEA.

Beginning with the Oxford English Course for Papua New Guinea in the 1950s and The Pacific Series in the 1960s and 1970s, OUP has worked closely with local governments, educators, authors and illustrators to publish a comprehensive program of textbooks and resources specifically developed for the students of Papua New Guinea.

Today, OUP's commitment to publishing for Papua New Guinea remains unrivalled. OUP continues to publish outstanding educational materials for elementary, primary and secondary students and strives to pursue positive partnerships with local authors, teachers and educators for the benefit of the people of Papua New Guinea.
