

An epic reading adventure from Reception/P1...

14

15

100% decodable, children can read these books independently from the start, building confidence and reading stamina.

An Odd Bug
Oxford Level 2
(Red Book Band)

Arkon, The Old One, was standing in front of a glistening blue lake of energy. It was the Pool of Power.

Nok stepped forwards and raised his hand in a greeting.

4

"I'm so glad to see you, Arkon!" said Nok.

"I am glad to see you too, Nok," Arkon said. He turned to the others. "Welcome, Max, Cat, Ant and Tiger."

5

Motivating reads which develop positive attitudes towards reading.

Battle with the Beast
Oxford Level 7
(Turquoise Book Band)

...through to Years 3 and 4/P4-5...

Children enjoy the adventures of the characters. The levelled texts are attractive and appealing to children. It provides motivation to read on through levels.

Sam Phillips, The Mead Community Primary School, Trowbridge, Wilts

Chapter 3 – Out of the tunnel

The loop of energy flew towards Max. If he didn't act quickly he would be trapped. Max pressed the button on his watch and shrank. The lasso passed over him as he shot through the middle of the loop.

There was a loud SPLASH! Max looked behind him. Trikob had been leaning too far out when he threw the lasso. His board had toppled over and he had fallen off. Now his board was sinking and Trikob was floundering in the water.

Stories become more challenging as your children develop their reading skills.

The Contest
Oxford Level 11
(Lime Book Band)

My son Daniel is in Year 1 and absolutely loves the Project X Alien Adventure stories and they're really motivating him to read independently. For World Book Day this March my son wanted to dress up as Nok, and he won.

Katy Wright, Parent

Suddenly the herd became agitated. They started to flick their heads around and snort loudly.
"Hey! What's wrong with them?" Ant asked.
The nurps were swatting at the air with their trunks. As Max and Ant crept closer to the herd, they became aware of a harsh buzzing sound.

A hazy cloud surrounded the nurps. Max and Ant could see hundreds of small metal objects swirling above them.
"It must be the cyberbee swarm!" cried Ant. They watched as the swarm circled the herd like a cloud of glitter hovering in mid-air. The jungle was filled with the sound of annoyed 'nurping'.

Action-packed stories and stunning artwork make Alien Adventures the first choice for many children.

Cyberbee Break Out
Oxford Level 13
(Grey Book Band)

...right up to the end of Year 6/P7

"Down!" Tiger cried. Maximus dropped his head immediately. Tiger felt his tummy flip as they fell. They were headed for the buildings.

"Turn!" Julian warned. "Turn. Turn!"

Tiger yanked the rein-bar right.

Maximus tried to respond, but Tiger had left it too late. The angle was too sharp. The horse's body turned right, but the chariot veered too sharply. They were dropping fast.

The chariot bumped and bashed at the end of the poles. Tiger's feet slipped out of the footholds. Julian tried to take the reins, but it was all happening too quickly. Tiger couldn't balance. He was thrown up and out! There was nothing below him but hard earth.

Tiger felt Julian grab his collar. He was yanked back into the chariot.

A new artwork style at Years 5 and 6/P6-P7 reflects children's maturing tastes.

The Way Between Worlds
Oxford Level 15
(Dark Blue Book Band)

Alien Adventures Companions

Four Companions offer fun facts about the characters, spacesuits and gadgets, as well as comic strip adventures, games, jokes, and things to make and do.

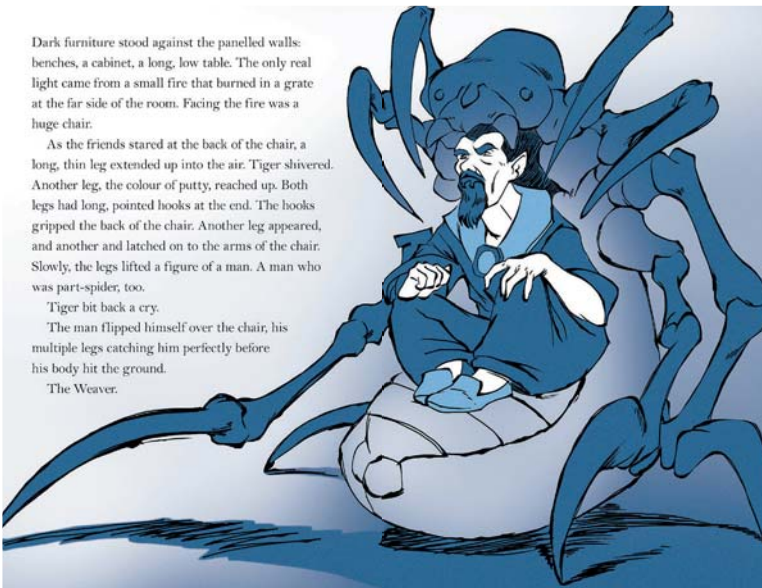

Dark furniture stood against the panelled walls: benches, a cabinet, a long, low table. The only real light came from a small fire that burned in a grate at the far side of the room. Facing the fire was a huge chair.

As the friends stared at the back of the chair, a long, thin leg extended up into the air. Tiger shivered. Another leg, the colour of putty, reached up. Both legs had long, pointed hooks at the end. The hooks gripped the back of the chair. Another leg appeared, and another and latched on to the arms of the chair. Slowly, the legs lifted a figure of a man. A man who was part-spider, too.

Tiger bit back a cry.

The man flipped himself over the chair, his multiple legs catching him perfectly before his body hit the ground.

The Weaver.

These stories provide the challenge your children need to meet the new higher standards.

The Face of Fear
Oxford Level 18
(Dark Red Book Band)