Ralph Tells a Story	Abby Hanlon (2012)	Early Primary	Ralph thinks that nothing ever exciting happens to him. So, when it's writing time at school he can't think of a thing to write about. His classmates give him ideas and he begins to write. He then learns that perhaps small things, such as what he had for breakfast and the things he does to annoy his classmates can lead to ideas for writing and perhaps he really does have plenty of stories to tell. This book could help younger reluctant writers come up with ideas for their own work.
